

April 1957

ART NEWS

Maurice Sievan [Passedoit; to April 6], fresh from a sojourn in France, has introduced a nervous, almost calligraphic, Impressionism of stroke into his style as well as the opalescent color typical of later French Impressionism; hence, the muted colors and molten forms of his previous impressions of American land and seascapes, side by side with his new views of figures resting on verandas, suggest a parallel between historic and personal transitions. The heart of his painting is that atmosphere in which objects, colors and chiaroscuro tend to be indistinguishably wedded. Through their light touch and delicate modulations, his works show taste. Prices unquoted.

P.T.

CHARLES Z. OFFIN, Editor-in-Chief

APRIL, 1957

MAURICE SIEVAN, "elegist of the suburbs," is seen in a new exhibition of oil paintings at the Passedoit. The artist's tie is to the France of the Impressionists and the provinces. of naps

ARTS

incorporating Arts Digest

APRIL 1957

MARGARET BREUNING Writes:

... the new freedom and subtlety in Sievan's oils ...

