

Maurice Sievan, Oombix, 1962, oil on canvas, 69½" x 60"

Vanderwoude Tananbaum

24 E 81 St

NYC 10028

Maurice Sievan, Eebak, 1962, oil on canvas, 86" x 69"

Photo credit: Lee C. Sievan

Maurice Sievan, Mark Rothko's Studio, Provincetown, Mass., 1961

Maurice Sievan

1898–1981

While painting full time, Maurice Sievan wrote reams of "Random Notes" in areas of very special interest to him—philosophy, literature, poetry and music. Images evoked by the poetry of William Blake, Edgar Allan Poe and the writings of Samuel Beckett summoned visionary memories which continued to intrigue and distress him for many years. In the 1960's his huge phantom-like figures were the embodiment of thoughts inspired by this imagery, and the metaphoric form rendered expressed an existential view of the human condition. —Lee C. Sievan, 1985

Vanderwoude Tananbaum

April 1
thru April 26, 1986

Reception
Tuesday, April 1, 5-7 pm

24 E 81St NYC 10028
212 879 8200